

If a link featured in an activity doesn't work, don't worry. There are other ways that you can approach the activity!

If a link to a video is not working:

- Try to find another video with the same title, or a similar title. Substitute this video for the video with the dead link.
- If you are having difficulty finding another video that sounds similar, try searching a different video website, such as Vimeo.
- If the activity requires you to use a specific video, make your own activity using a different video that you find! If the activity asked you to summarize the main ideas of a video located at www.youtube.com/deadlink, for example, just summarize the main ideas of the video you found instead (don't forget to copy the URL for the video you found)! Then, ask someone to help you review your work.
- If you can't find another video that sounds similar, try interviewing a native or fluent English speaker about the topic of the video with a dead link. Ask that person if they would mind being recorded so you could practice your English using their speech – promise to delete the recording after you have mastered the skill!
- If none of the above options are possible, use a search engine to look for an online article or website with similar information. Then, practice the strategy or skill you learned in the iEnglish video using the print source instead of the video.

If a link to a website or document is dead:

- Search the Internet using a search engine to find something similar. Use "quotation marks" or a "+" sign to make your search more specific. Substitute the article or document that had a dead link with the one you find. If the activity required you to guess the meaning of new vocabulary in Document A, try to do it instead with Document B.
- You might want to plan a visit to any branch of the Winnipeg Public Library and ask a staff member to help you locate resources on the same topic as the website or document that is unavailable. Use these resources as a rich substitute, and complete the activity.

Remember...

- Don't be afraid to make your own activities! Remember, iEnglish is intended to help you achieve your own unique goals. This may require you to create your own unique activities!
